

Drools powered PDI transformation step

For each row processed by the Rules Step, each column is converted to a Rules.Column class, the main properties of which are “name” and “payload”. These columns are then injected into the rules engine and executed against.

The DRL should generate more Rules.Column classes that contain the desired output results. The step can be configured to pick these up and add them to the result row.

